WILLIAM SCHELL'S HOME IS DESOLATE.

Mrs. Schell Burned to a Crisp by an Exploding Lamp.

FOUR MOTHERLESS CHILDREN

usband of the Dead Woman Horribly Burned While Attempting to Save Her Life.

The home of William Schell, 1228 North High street, presents a distressing picture of desolation. Yesterday he was happy in the possession of a loving wife and merry children, and two strong and willing hands with which to earn a living for them. Now all is changed. His wife is dead, his children, the oldest 8 years old, are motherless and his hands are swathed in bandages, one of them perhaps crippled forever.

Whila preparing supper Friday Mrs. Schell had occasion to descend to the Var for something to complete the meal, took a coal oil lamp and started down the ps just outside the kitchen door. Her brother, William Quade, was sitting in the kitchen reading, and her husband was in front of the house.

body. His right hand is helpless, the tendons having given way. His left hand is not so badly burned, but will be useless for some time.

A Post-Dispatch reporter visited the stricken home Saturday morning. Everything was in the wildest disored. The bereaved husband and father sat helplessly in a chair, surrounded by his sobbing collidren. It was a piffful picture of human in a chair, surrounded by his sobbing children. It was a piciful picture of human misery. Kind-hearted neighbors had proffered their assistance and were trying to straighten things out a bit.

Scheil had not fully recovered from the stupefaction his loss and physical suffering brought upon him. He struggled to his feet, however, and showed the reporter how it happened. During the recital his voice was broken by sobs.

"I don't know just how it happened," he said. "I was stiting out in front when I heard my brother-in-law call. When I got there she was all on fire, She must have fallen down the steps, as the lamp was broken to pieces. I did my best to save her, but couldn't. What we will do now I can't think."

The funeral of Mrs. Schell will be held Surday. Schell is a baker, honest and industrious.

But don't ever ask me how I should feel were yop ever to leave for so far, as I should never expect to see you again. You are always saying our marriage was a failure. How many thousands think the same, yet would not undo what they have done if they were compelled to. Now, say, let us make the best of it; each try to help the other along, and, if ever we are no more man and wife, it shall be you who are to blame.

Please don't write like that again. And if you wish very badly to rid yourself of me, you will have to do it yourself. Sometimes I think maybe you happy. But, of; why such thoughts. I will leave the matter in your hands, whether to make me happy or miserable. Now adden, and write as soon as you get this. You now have my opinion in the matter, and I can never change. wife's reference to his desire to secure a divorce as the imagination of a nervous woman.

Saturday Maas was confronted by Dr. Reke. The latter's statement is that Maas induced him to take out $4,000 insurance in the Actna, and that he was examined by Dr. Kier. Afterward Maas persuaded him to double the amount of the policy, and br. Reke paid him $134.68 premium. Dr. Reke heard nothing more of the application and taxed Maas with trying to swindle him. This Maas stoutly denied. Dr. Reke yesterday visited the Actna office in the Odd Fellows' building, and there found that the application had not been forwarded because Manager-Haynes thought his weight too great in proportion to his height, for the application to be accepted. Then it developed that Dr. Reke had been credited with but half the premium paid, and that his application had not been made out for but $1.000 insurance.

Maas again denied the circumstances when Dr. Reke confronted him Saturday, but a warrant charging embezglement from the Actna company was issued.

Detective Tebeau is now investigating a statement that Maas secured $50 from John Overbeck of $115 North Broadway under similar circumstances.

Maas refused to discuss the charge against him further than to say there was nothing in it. He has been in St. Louis several months, formerly stopping at the Planters' Hotel. He has also worked in Detroit, Mich., and Pittsburg and Harrisburg, Pa.

FIVE BABIES IN FOUR DAYS.

Such . Was the Luck of the Dunham Family of Perguson.

An interesting and unusual family reunion was held in Ferguson Saturday at the residence of Morel S. Dunham.

The Dunham family consists of the mother, Mrs. Lucinda Dunham, a lady well known in St. Louis church circles, and her four sons, Charles E. Dunham, a Chicago artist; M. S. Dunham, well known in wholesale grocery circles; J. M. Dunham, a rising and talented St. Louis architect, and W. A. Dunham, a St. Louis broker.
In the week of Aug. 3 to 7, 1833, five bables were born to the four brothers, the aggregate, weight of all the bables being fiftyfour pounds.

Chicago secured the honors of the occasion by producing twenty-one pounds of baby, a boy and a girl.

with them. These confederates were hired to impersonate spirits of the dead.

This exposure is likely to shake the faith of many local believers in materializations, yet it was one of their St. Louis victims who instigated the plan which led to the arrest of the whole party.

Moore and his wife were very clever. By the aid of their confederates and paraphernalia they were able to produce alleged materializations which convinced many who had hitherto been sceptical.

In St. Louis they managed to produce figures which looked like imperfect or incomplete materializations. A gentieman was convinced that he saw a complete materialization of his daughter; he was advised not to look at her face, the reason given 'ugitat until the spirit was quite en rapport with surrounding conditions, the development would not be complete, and it was not; the eyes appeared to be missing and only the sockets were visible. Still this figure talked and convinced the bereaved father that she was his daughter. She wore a veil composed of very finely spun material and she professed to be able to materialize a part of it, so that it would not disappear when she returned to spirit land. A part of it was cut off and preserved as a relic. All these things were told in detail in the Post-Dispatch at the time.

Capt. Joseph Brown, City Auditor, was one of the victims of these people. He had investigated spiritualistic philosophy for years. He liked the theory, but could not be convinced of the truth of materialization. For thirty years he fought it, but the wonderful performances of Moore partially convinced him that there was something in it.

Before Moore and his wife completed their St. Louis engagement Capt. Brown's suspicions were aroused. He watehed them closely and at length was satisfied they were frauds. After they left here he wrote to Moore and told him unequivocally that he had discovered he was an imposter.

Capt. Brown was not at all surprised when told of the arrest of the party. He said:

"I have been expecting it. It was I who i wat Hardin returned to headquarters here from his joint debate tour of the Third District with Col. W. O. Bradley, he was greeted with a warmth and cordiality which have never been accorded him by the "Louisville crowd." Gen. Hardin has never been popular in Louisville, and professor and propular in Louisville.

ast June, he only fed oil to the flames of libcontent.

It is known of all men that when the State Convention gave him the nomination for Covernor on a gold basis platform, and over the stubborn protests of the Louisville oliticians, they announced to the world with blare of trumpets that Hardin would have o renounce his free silver views and advocate the cause of Clevelandism or get off he track. The daily press boasted of this, and the Carlisle claquers went up and down he country bragging of how they had whipped Wat Hardin to line." For eachs after the convention, which nominated him on the first ballot, Hardin was significant of the currency question.

Carlisle dictrines of finance.

Under these conditions of uncertainty and doubt, three weeks ago he made his initial speech of the campalgn in this city. That speech was a sore disappointment to his admirers and critics alike. Primarily its manner of delivery was poor and its subject-matter was devoid of clearness on any issue of the campaign-most of all on the currency. As matter of fact, Gen. Hardin's first meeting with the agile and voluble Bradley was a pronounced failure. For this reason Democratic hopes ran low, and the news was flashed all over the country that the party was doomed to ignominious defeat in Kentucky this year. The gold-bugs encouraged this belief, because Hardin had not seen fit to stultify himself by espéusing their cause, and the old-line, conservative Democratic gave it credence because his speech was not up to the Démocratic standard.

because his speech was not up to the Democratic standard.

Thus circumstanced Gen. Hardin left Louisville with Col. Bradley to make the circuit for the joint debate arranged between them. Not a daily newspaper in Kentucky gave them kindly encouragement and not a one of "the Louisville crowd" but that had turned their backs on him. His second speech was a vast improvement on the first, and Democratic hope began to rise again. His third speech was still better, and the energies of the party all over the State were quickened. Then came the conference at Louisville between th nominoes and the State Committees, when Gen. Hardin defied Chairman Long. Gen. John B. Castleman and other gold-bug members of the committee, and declared his intention of interpreting the Louisville platform in accord with time-honored Democratic colnage doctrine. In this stand he was supported by all the other nominees except "Dick" Tyler, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. The daily press raised a witchty how and a part of it drouped his was supported by all the other nomines except 'Dick' Tyler, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. The daily press raised a mighty howl, and a part of it dropped his name from the head of the ticket, but Gen. Hardin, in his next meeting with Bradley, spoke with his old-time vigor and eloquence, and unprejudiced witnesses declare that he completely routed Col. Bradley in the debate. He had broken the fetters which had bound him from the first and was himself again. He commenced to talk silver as he had talked it all through the canvase for the nor-fation, and the crowds went wild with belight. And he is going to keep on the nor-fation, and the crowds went wild with belight. And he is going to keep on the nor-fation and the crowds went wild with belight. And he is going to keep on the nor-fation and the crowds went wild with belight. And he is going to keep on the nor-fation and the crowds went wild with belight. And he is going to keep on the nor-fation and the crowds went wild with belight. And he is going to keep on the nor-fation and the west generally to be of good cheer."

"You can tell the Democrats of Missouri and the West generally to be of good cheer." said Major L. C. Norman, Chairman of the Campaign Committee. Kentucky is safe, and we will elect our ticket by at least 20,000 plurality. We were in danger for awhile, but we are all right now. Gen. Hardin is setting a fast pace and Bradley will be left so far behind in November that he will never be heard of again."

Major Norman is not an idle talker. Least of all is he is given to boasting. All factions concede him to be the shrewdest politician if the State, overnment in various capacities for the last twenty years, has held the office of Auditor for two terms and is a candidate for re-election. He belongs to the school of extremely practical politicians, and when he says the Democratic ticket is going to, win in Kentucky this fail the statement can be relied on.

"Gen. Hardin, do you feel at all uneasy about your relations?"

"Gen. Hardin, do you feel at all uneasy about your election?" the correspondent asked the candidate for Governor on his return to Louisville from the joint debate at Litchfield.

Litchneid. "Not now," was Gen. Hardin's cautious but emphatic answer.

"For awhile after the campaign opened dangerous demoralization seemed to pervade the Democratic ranks. Caim, coolyidgment has returned, however, and our whole ticket is going to be elected by a big majority. There may yet be some dissatisfaction in spots, but within the next few weeks that will all disappear. I understand there is still some rumbling of revolt here in Louisville, but that doesn't signify much. I know nothing about city politics and care less except as it may affect the general result. During the last week my mail has been flooded with assurances from every section of the State, and particularly from the first four districts, that the party is being aroused, and that the full strength of the Democratic vote will be polled in November. That's all we can ask. There are more. Democratis in Kentfecky than Republicans—many thousands more—and for that reason slone the talk of Republican success is ridiculous now that Democratic harmony and activity have been restored. Another favorable and encouraging sign is contained in the assurances which crowd the mail now on my desk that thousands of Populists are going to vote for me. Down in Warren County the other day the Populist held a meeting and adopted a resolution pledging their support to the Democratic ticket. This is a straw showing the direction of the wind. It also shows that the Populist movement, the most dangerous which the Democracy in Kentucky has to combat, is being checked. The voters who wandered off from us and gave the Populist movement strength and respectability are coming back."

"Was asked." replied Gen. Hardin.

Adolph Bion, aged 26, was arrested Friday in connection with a series of forgeries by which the account of his brother, Max Bion, at the Merchants'-Laclede Bank was overdrawn. Max thought he had $500 in bank, and when he was notified of the depletion of his pile, he said that his signature had been forged to checks in favor of Charles Plack and a man named Turner. Adolph Bion denies all knowledge of the alleged forgeries. Adolph received an inheritance of $5,000 when he became of age, and he spent it in a few years.

READY TO DEPART FOR CUBA.

The Spanish Consul-General Appeals to the United States Marshal to Intercept Capt. Dillon.

NEW YORK, August 31.—A morning paper says emissaries of the Spanish Government went to New London, Conn., last night on information for which the Consul-General of Spain in this city paid $100, to the effect that a Cuban filibustering expedition is on the point of sailing from Gardiner's Bay, opposite New London.

The information implicates Captain Dillion, of renown in similar undertakings during revolutionary troubles in Hayti, now commanding the steamer Commodore, of 170 tons burthen, which has hitherto been engaged in fishing.

The "supplies" that the captain is taking on at Gardiner's Bay are declared to be arms and ammunition made up in packages to simulate ordinary merchandise as contents.

to simulate ordinary merchandise as contents.

The ostensible purchase of the commodore was given out as a fishing expedition to Southport, N. C., and with this alleged object, the work of engaging a crew for the vessel has been going on in this city for some time.

The news of the preparation was taken to the Spanish Consulate-General in Stone street, and such evidence was furnished by the informant that no hesitation was apparent on the part of the officials in tendering him the sum of $100 in appreciation of the service. The equipment of the Commodore was said to be formidable, and it was also stated that before another day had passed she would be cleared at New London for the North Carolina port, but with her nose pointed straight for the eastern end of Cuba, where the insurgents are virtually in control.

He dispatched several men to New London, with instructions to communicate immediately on arrival with the United States Marshal of the district and libel the Commodore to prevent her departure, pending investigation by the Federal authorities. NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—A World dispatch from Colon, Colombia, says:

Efforts have been made to induce Colombia to recognize the Cuban insurgents as belligerents, but thus far without success. The Isthmian press is strongly in favor of it. Referring to Russia's gift to Monetenegro of thirty thousand rifles and fifteen million cartridges, the Isthmian press says: "Such a gift to the Cubans would immensely aid in their struggle for liberty. Several nations would help the Cubans if international law did not prevent. But for international law, the new Republic of Cuba's flag of freedom would float to-morrow over every fortification in Cuba, which to-day with Sonalish guns."

St. Leuis Wholesale Grocers Object to Its Iron Rules.

A fight has been begun by the St. Louis wholesale grocery trade against the Diamond Match Co., better known as the Match Trust. Several wholesale grocers have refused to renew their contracts with the trust, and others are said to contemplate a similar step.

The Diamond Match Co. has factories in St. Louis, Dayton, O., and at points in New Jersey. The company has an enormous capitalization and was for many years in ontrol of the match situation, as no oppo tion existed. Under these conditions the trust was dictatorial in its dealings with the jobbng trade, threatening if any other matches were handled by the jobbers, to cut Jobbing trade, threatening if any other matches were handled by the Jobbers, to cut off their supplies. This meant much inconvenience to the trade for a long time, as none but foreign matches were to be had and those only at high prices, owing to the prohibitory tariff. Within the past two years opposition factories have sprung up in all parts of the country and the jobbing trade can get full supplies of matches at lower or even prices.

The agreement or contract the Diamond Match Co. has heretofore forced the wholesale grocers to sign required them to make affidavit that for the six months preceding they had not handled any but the brands of matches made by that company. If they had been "good boys" during that time, as a wholesale grocer put it, and had lived strictly up to their agreement, and no complaints had been made by competing grocers, the trust paid them a meager rebate on the total amount of their sales. This rebate constituted the sole profit on sales, as the matches were sold at the long price, and if the slightest dereliction was proven that profit was cut off.

The jobbing trade is highly indignant over the situation and many of the heaviest handlers of matches which, it is claimed, are in every respect equal in quality to those made by the trust.

Among the firms which have refused to renew the annual contract, recently expired, are the James M. Houston Grocer Co. and C. L. Buschmann & Co. Others will take the same step.

Altnether Boys Go Down to Death in Each Other's Embrace.

From the door of Joseph Altnether's pretty little brick cottage at 434 Virginia avenue flutters a piece of white crepe, and within a sorrowing father and mother are crushed with grief. Last night their two sons were drowned. John, aged iš, and Aloes, aged iš. The lads were drowned in a pond in the rear of the House of Refuge, on Virginia avenue and Gasconade street, into which they plunged to save their younger brother Wilke from drowning.

The Athenters are very plous people and last night the three oldest boys were sent by their father to attend services at the Monks' Chapel, just around the corner on Meramee and Compton avenue. As it was a warm eevning the boys had very little inclination to spend it in church, so instead of obeying their father they wandered down virginia avenue thout two blocks from their home to the pond near the House of Refuge to go in bathing.

For a few minutes he splurged around in the water near the edge and then started to wade toward the middle. About teh feet from the shore he auddenly uttered a piercing shriek and sank. The boys on the edge of the pond stood as if paralyzed and gazed with horror on the spot where Willied disappeared. In a moment he rose to the surface, struggling violently and erying for help. Without waiting to take off their clothing John and Aloes heroically plunged in to rescue their drowning brother. They quickly reached him and Willie tightly grasped the rescuers about their necks. Then, came a desperate strugggle, the two brothers trying with all their might to save Willie and Willie and Willie and Willie, who had help. Willie and willie all the time choking and fighting and clutching his brothers so lightly that they were nearly strangled. Their however water-socked clothing made their movement trying with all their might to save willies and willie all the time choking and fighting and clutching his brothers. Aloes must have been selzed with cramps or else Willie had choked him so hard that, embarrassed by his clothing, he hadn't strength enough left to swim back to shore. John tried to help him. The boys on the bank saw them go down, tightly clasped in each other's embrace. The moon was shining bright and the waters and th

Henry Schuetz, a farmer, residing in St. Clair Township, was severely burned last night by an explosion of gunpowder. He dampersed a quantity of powder and placed it in a tin bucket, igniting it to produce a cloud of smoke, intending, by such means, to drive the mosquitoes from his house. A portion of the powder burned, as expected, without exploding, but the rest of it became dry and flashed in the farmer's face. As a result, Schultz's face was badly powder-burned, and he will carry the marks through life, he does not lose his eye sight. Joseph Stander was arrested last night by Officers Wasem and Letter for creating a disturbance at the residence of his parents. He resisted arrest, and the officers resorted to force, using their clubs with effect. Three slight gashes on Stander's head were dressed at the police station by County Physician Healy.

NEW CANDY FACTORY.

Report That the Cracker Trust Is to mense confectionery manufacturing plant in the addition which is being built to the Dosier Bakery, at Sixteenth and Morgan streets.

The St. Louis officers of that company are non-committal over the project, denying that such a move is contemplated. It is learned, however, that the cracker trust will not only establish a candy factory in St. Louis but also one as an adjunct to the Dake Bakery at Chicago. The intention is to manufacture confectionery to supply the smaller branches of the cracker trust located at various points in the West. The general jobbing trade will also be supplied from the St. Louis and Chicago factories.

Considerable uneasiness exists among the St. Leuis confectionery manufacturers over the rumor. This city has an annual output of $0,000,000 pounds of candy and prices have for a long time been at a very close margin. Several factories, owing to their inability to secure trade, have been forced out of business in the past two years. It is feared by the remaining factories that if the cracker trust enters into the manufacture of confectionery it will secure business by putting prices at so low a figure as to eat up the already meager profits.

If such steps are taken the local candy men will probably fight the trust in its weak spot by establishing an independent cracker bakery. It is believed that from $100,000 to $150,000 could be raised among $8t. Louis candy men for this purpose.

O. H. Peckham, President of the O. H. Peckham Candy Manufacturing Co., said that he hoped the new factory would not be put in operation, as there was not room for it in $t. Louis.

"The business of making confectionery," said Mr. Peckham, "is already overdone in this city. We are selling goods on a bare margin of profit and I do not think another large factory could do any business except by lowering prices to below cost."

Mr. Peckham would not say whether the local factories would, in retallation, start Storts Habeas Corpus Laid Over.

The Storts habeas corpus proceedings set for Saturday morning in Circuit Court No. 7, before Judge Dillon, was continued until Sept. 5, on account of the arrest of Storts and his consequent failure to appear. The hearing had been continued from Aug. 25 to give Storts time to introduce evidence as to the facts of the commitment.

Aug. 17 Judge Peabody committed Storts to the calaboose for twenty-four hours and fined him 1909 for contempt of court. A few days later Storts applied for a writ of habeas corpus before Judge Dillon, against city Marshal Emile Themas, alleging he was held illegally by Thomas, Judge Dillon dismissed the petition on the ground that Storts was the prisoner of the keeper of the calaboose and not of the City Marshal. Storts then procured a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Kline against the keeper of the calaboose and was admitted to bail pending a hearing. Judge Kline later transferred the case to Judge Dillon.

"I believe he loves me yet, though," Mrs. Perry once heard her sob, "and would come to see me if he, too, were not sick. Well, when I die he will get my life insurance and then he can take a trip somewhere and get well."

When pressed for a further statement the weazened liftle old woman stopped talking entirely and pretended to fall asleep.

For the past year Mrs. Bloom has lived in a tenement house at Twenty-first and Franklin avenue with her husband, Edward Bloom. She was of a kind and gentle nature, and was a general favorite with the other residents of the building, who called her "grandma." Of late her health has been gradually failing, although her mind remained clear up to the time she went to the hospital. For several weeks before she went there s had been trying to go. She had asked her husband to notify the police, but he refused. Then she enlisted the services of one of the neighbors, who told the officer on the beat, and the old lady was taken away in an ambulance. According to the neighbors the Blooms had seen better days. The old woman gave continual evidences of refinement and sometimes dropped remarks that showed she had at one time possessed plenty of this world's goods. She was born in Scotland, and her husband is an Englishman. He abused and neglected her, so the neighbors say, but she bore it patrently. When she went to the hospital she bade her friends good-by, and told them she never expected to see them again. Her husband's last word to her was an oath, and he has not heard from her or visited her since she went away.

The neighbors were shocked at learning of "Grandma's" terrible death, and could attribute it only to the despair of helpless and hopeless old age. Bloom is very poor and out of work.

On Account of Peculiar Actions She Had Been Confined in an Upper Ward With Barred Windows.

Mrs. Jane Bloom, old and bent and so shriveled and shrunken by age as to appear more like a shoat than a thing of fiesh and blood, leaped from the third story landing of the fire escape at the Female Hospital, yesterday afternoon, and died a half hour afterwards. The bones of both legs were broken in two or three places and the base of the skull was terribly fractured. When picked up her poor, emaciated face wore the only smile that had dimpled its wrinkles since she was placed in the hospital Aug. It was a smile of triumph. Dearth was approaching, she knew, and she welcomed the old monster's embrace joyfully.

"I can't live long, can I?" she whispered the old monster's embrace joyfully.

"The Golden Rod" was Mrs. Thomas' masterpiece. It was made famous during the national flower agritation in 1889 by the late Patrick Gilmore.

The other song was "Memorare," dedicated in 1890 to Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore.

These songs were placed with the above firm, to be copyrighted, and until a few weeks ago Mrs. Thomas imagined that this had been done. At that time some Eastern publisher issued the song in a cheap edition. The local attorneys George D. Reynolds and W. M. Kinsey investigated and discovered that no record of the copyright had been made nor had one been issued. Without notifying Messrs. Balmer and Weber, a sult was filed in the United States Commissioner Gray at 12:30 p. m., Saturday, claiming that the well-known local concern had purposely neglected to have her work copyrighted and thereby it had become public property; that she was minus royalty and damaged to the extent of $5,000 in "Golden Rod," $5,000 in "Memorare" and $5,000 in royatiles that she didn't get.

Mr. Balmer recently read of Spofford's defalcation, and immediately set about investigating. He discovered that many popular pleces supposed to have been copyrighted, not music alone, but literature, were now public property through the action of Spofford.

MOB FOILED.

They Meant to Lynch Mrs. Menden al's Murderer.

JONESBORO, Ill., Aug. 31.-A mob of or 100 determined men came to the jail at 1 o'clock this morning and demanded that John Jones, who so brutally murdered Mrs. John Jones, who so brutally murdered Mrs. Mendenhal on the Anna Fair Grounds yesterday, be delivered up to them. They carried a rope, but were quiet and orderly. The mob was foiled, however, as Sheriff Day had heard of the mob forming and sent Jones in charge of deputies by carriage ten miles to Dongola, where he was taken on the Illinois Central to Cairo, and placed in jail. The mob only dispersed after being allowed to search the jail.

OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION.

Officer Conley Must Explain Why He Invaded Miss Butler's Room.

Chief Harrigan ordered an official investigation of the charge made by Miss Annie Butler to a Post-Dispatch reporter that Officer Jack Conley of the Third District broke into her room at 3159 Sheridan avenue Thursday night. The report was received at the Chief's office at noon Saturday. Sergt. O'Sullivan states in his part of the report that the girl weakened in her statement and says the officer did not force her door. The report credits her with an almost complete denial of the story she told the Post-Dispatch.

Officer Conley's statement is that Mrs. Heeney, from whom the girl rents her room, complained to her that she was conducting a disorderly place and he called to investigate. He denies that he entered the room by force or that he insulted the girl. Nothing is contained in the report to show that Miss Butler's character is bad or that there was any reason to suspect her beyond the complaint Officer Conley says. Chief Harrigan ordered an official investi-

Militia Was Called Out to Remove Prisoners if Necessary.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 31 .- The end of the long workshop within the prison walls catercornered from the Executive mansion catercornered from the Executive mansion caught fire from sparks from emery wheels or from bot boxes at 2 o'clock this morning, and during the progress of the fire, for which two alarms had been sounded from the engine house, great excitement was raised by the ringing of the Courthouse bell to call out the McCreary Guards. The call for the militia was made by the Governor, who was watching the fire and feared that it might be necessary to remove the convicts. who was watching the fire and feared that it might be necessary to remove the convicts from the cell house, which would open the way for an outbreak. The citizens who had poured into the streets to the number of more than 1,000 supposed the Guards were summoned to protect Lane, the murderer of the Rodenbaughs, confined in jail here from a threatened attack of a mob, and they left the fire and ran to the Courthouse, where hundreds offered their services to the jailer to protect the prisoner. Fortunately the sevices of the militia or citizens were not necessary and within two hours the fire was extinguished by the city and prison fire department.

Wholessie Grocers of St. Louis has returned from New York. While away Mr. Furth consulted with the officers of the American Sugar Refining Company over the sugar situation. To a Post-Dispatch reporter he made the following statement regarding the situation in St. Louis and the threatened disruption of the Associated Wholesale Grocers:

"The withdrawal of several houses from membership can not be attributed to any dissatisfaction on their part with anything that the association has done in connaction with the sugar business.

"The Associated Wholesale Grocers of St. Louis make no price on sugar or any other commodity. There is no agreement between the members as to the selling price of anything. The association was started many years before the equality plan for the distribution of sugar had been thought of. It resis more particularly on sociability and good fellowship, and as an adjunct has a credit department which has saved untold thousands to the members of the association, and which has been the admiration of every trades center in the United States. The trouble in connection with the sale of sugar did not arise in this market and can not be settled here, even if all the grocers unite on any one proposition. I have just returned from a trip to the East, and have had an interview with the managers of the American Sugar Refining Company. They sympathize with those wholesale grocers who are forced to sell sugar without a profit by the unusual proceedings of a few scattered in the different trade centers of the land.

"The American Sugar Refining Company, however, will not be a party to any agreement, or to any action in consequence of which either the consumer or the tyade will be obliged to pay extortionate prices for sugar. This course is dictated by sound business policy, and as a consequence of which either the consumer or the tyade will be obliged to pay extortionate prices for sugar for the process of the land in the result of the sugar of the consumer of the test of the formation of the best interests o

TO RESTORE ROME'S EMPIRE. Catholics the World Over to Pray for This Sept. 20.

Archbishop Kain has sent a letter to all the priests in the diocese reminding them that Sept. 20 will be the twenty-fifth annithat Sept. 20 will be the twenty-nith anniversary of the day when the "Holy See was by violence robbed of its temporal possessions and the Sovereign Pontiff of that freedom of action so necessary for the welfare of the church."

The clergy are instructed to gather their people in the churches on Sept. 20, and to offer prayers "for the peace, prosperity and triumph of the Holy Church, and for the liberty and independence of the Holy See." The priests are permitted to select the prayers and to have the exposition and benediction of the sacrament.

The Archbishop concludes his letter with the statement that if Catholic societies choose to put their sentiments in resolutions, he will take pleasure in sending them to the Pope.

Archbishop Kain said, in explanation of his letter, that similar action has been taken by all Roman Catholic bishops the world over. The demonstrations to be made in Italy, Sept. 20, in honor of the capture of Rome have influenced the action on the part of Catholics. versary of the day when the "Holy See

NORTON'S GREENBACKS.

They Passed From Storts to Jennie Snyder and Vanished.

When John C. Norten came to St. Louis from Shannon County Friday he had his clothes full of money. He went at once to his friend, Jefferson R. Storts, the Police Court lawyer, and together they started out to do the town.

How well they succeeded may be judged from what follows. At a late hour Friday night they brought up at Jennie Snyder's resort on South Eleventh street. Norton was so drunk he couldn't tell his mother-in-law from a hair mattress. He had his roil with him and pulled it out and showed it to the inmates of the house and several male street.

pocket. That was the last seen of Norton's Sto. Storts and the Snyder woman sho disappeared and neither could be found until late Saturday morning.

At 9:30 c'clock the police swooped down on the Snyder castle and captured the woman and four inmates. They were taken to the Four Courts to be held for investigation. The woman said Storts counted the money out and that was all she knew about it.

The immates said after Storts counted the money he handed it to Jennie Snyder for safekeeping. They declare that Storts told the woman his friend Norton was drunk and llable to be robbed if he kept the money about him. He told her to keep the roll until Norton sobered up.

Meanwhile haif a dozen detectives and police officers were scouring the town in search of Storts. No trace of him could be found until he finally put in an appearance at the Court-house, where his case against Judge Peabody, who barred him from practice in the First District Police Court, was set for trial.

Officers who had been stationed at the Court-house to look for Storts at once placed Nim under arrest and took him to the Four Courts, where he was held for investigation. Norton was on hand and told his story of how he lost the money. Storts declared he gave the whole amount to Jenn'e Snyder and told her to keep it till Norton sobered up. Then he left the place to continus his spree.

The lawyer declared that when he left the house Norton and the Snyder woman were talking about going out for a carriage drive and spe had the money in her possession. He was out all night and claims to know nothing about the loss of the money. His story is corroborated by the inmates of the Snyder woman's house falled to reveal the money.

A search of the Snyder woman's house falled to reveal the money. Storts and the money and he and the Snyder woman were both locked up. Warrants were then sworn out, charging them with grand lareny. As the police can no longer accept ball and Judge Murphy had gone home, Storts and the wom an languish in the holdover.

There is nothing that St. Louis needs or her people want more than a free

But the St. Louis people have had bitter experience in the matter of getting one. They have been duped into supporting an alleged free bridge project and defrauded out of charters and privileges of great value which have since me the instruments of monopoly for fresh oppression. In so far as the Manufacturers' Association can devise a feasible plan with guarantees of free competition it will have the hearty good will and aid of the people. But the reputed plan of having the bridge built by the city is beset with difficulties. It requires a charter amendment and special laws. It requires the consent of the people to additional taxation and the problem of management must be solved.

All honest efforts to get a free bridge which will stay free are assured of support, but St. Louisans will not stand any ore bridge jobbery. They have suffered enough from that.

THE PHYSICAL WOMAN.

An effort is being made by an Eastern follower of Schopenhauer to show that the woman of this century is defective in physical development; that she is spindleshanked and without muscle, and that she has degenerated considerably from her original state.

However true this may be in the ex-East-and even that is to be ibted-it is certainly not true of the Western woman. Here in Missouri she is not only not "spindle-shanked," but has a splendid abundance of muscle to support her feminine development of brain

THE "SOUND MONEY" CAMPAIGN.

It is evident from the reports from the interior of the State that the "St. Louis Sound Money League" is doing its best toward developing an interest in that phase of the money question.

Mr. Lehmann's speech at Jefferson City is a case in point. He talked long and free coinage of silver, and he had a small ice of persons who had heard him on the tariff question in 1894.

But the trouble with this sort of missionary work is that it emanates from men who have special corporation intersts behind them, and who are therefor not in touch with the people. Men want to know why Mr. Lehmann, an Iowa attorney of the Wabash Railroad, under a ular salary to work at his desk in St. uls every day, should find the occasion and the opportunity to travel over the State of Missouri in the interest of

THE INDIANS AND THE LAW.

If the United States District Attorney and the United States Marshal of Wyom ing have not grossly misrepresented the situation at Jackson's Hole the record of atrocious and unpunished crimes against Indians will be increased by the Jackson's Hole murders.

Both of these officials add their testimony to the overwhelming evidence already submitted that the whites were the aggressors and that the cause of the trouble was the wanton murder of un-offending Indians by the whites. But both agree that it is useless to expect the punishment of the murderers, No officials, Federal, State or county, they affirm, will hold or try the criminals. District Attorney Clark names the United States Commissioner as an official who would be certain to release the accused persons should they be brought before him.

Is this to be the end of these crimes? Are officials, known to be so biased that the uselessness of bringing the murder ers of Indians before them for trial is publicly admitted, to be allowed to remain in office? Shall the United States give notice that the Indians who are under their special protection may be murdered at will with impunity? If this is the way the law is to be adninistered it would be better to outlaw the Indians at once and throw them to the dogs. We shall not then at least be guilty of the cruel hypogrisy of prethe law while failing to enforce the law for their protection

BUDDENSEIK BUILDINGS.

The Coroner's jury has returned a verdict of guilty against the contractor, foreman, architect and building inspect- their bosses. ors who were connected with the erection of the Ireland death trap on West Broadway, New York, the collapsing of which killed fifteen workmen. It is to be hoped the law allows. Only in this way will it be possible to check the growing carelessness of builders and building inspectors. It is all very well for Chicago to claim that the system of steel construction which was inaugurated by that city so vastly superior to other systems that buildings put up under it "are fire proof, wind proof, earthquake proof." The collapse of the New York death trap proves that scamp work under this system is even more dangerous than if the building contained no steel columns, girders and fire bricks

It is a fact that all large cities-New York certainly, and St. Louis especially—have incorporated into their ordinances such full and exact provisions for the safe and proper erection of buildings, that when one collapses it is absolutely certain that there has been criminal neglect, and that the city authorities responsible for inspection are among the guilty parties. The sections of the Revised Ordinance of St. Louis providing for a Commissioner of Public Buildings and describing his duties are so explicit and thorough going that if conscientious men were uniformly chosen for this important office, St. Louis would never have to fear for the safety of its buildings. Yet within the last few weeks two school buildings have been erected by the ordinance, other buildings have been put up without any permit, and long since this ordinance was adopted Chicago builders were allowed to come here and put up a death trap on Washington avenue, the collapse of which still furnishes that thoroughfare with a far from picturesque ruin. Better than punishing negligence after accidents have occurred would be the prevention of accidents by the enforcement of the laws. Men without ability or conscience should stand no chance of occupying the post of Building Inspector.

Shrewd advertisers have learned that it is not affidavits but circulation that makes advertising pay, and that the quality of the circulation is as important as the quantity. The Post-Dispatch not only has the biggest but the best circulation, daily and Sunday, of any newspaper published in St. Louis. This is why intelligent advertisers prefer it when they could place their ads in other news papers at half the price. It pays them.

The value of car fenders has already been illustrated in St. Louis in the case of the bicycler who was caught by one on Washington avenue. If it is true that may be that his confidence in the fender led him to consider that any warning would be superfluous. But the fender is cautions. None should be neglected.

AFTER COOPER AND BLISS TOO.

Associated Cycling Clubs Make It Warm for Class B.

SUSPENSIONS ASKED FOR

Cabanne, Titus and Murphy Charged With Fixing Races and Bliss and Cooper With Breaking Faith.

Class B cycle racers will have a hard time of it if they do not treat the St. Louis public fairly and the associated cycling clubs have determined to make life uncem-fortable for those who are guilty of un-fair dealing. The A. C. C. has entered a protest and asked for the suspension of protest and asked for the suspension of Bilss and Cooper for not appearing at the Diamond Tournament last Saturday after a promise had been obtained that they would ride, and the local officers have also asked that summary punishment be visited upon Cabanne, Titus and Murphy if the charges that have been circulated around town are true. This affects five of the fastest men in the country.

The racing rules provide that after a promise has been made by the men or their employers to appear they are in duty bound to ride, and if they do not they are liable to suspension. They are also very stringent in reagrd to crooked work on the track, and R is worth a year's time for any racing man to be caught at it. It is charged that Cabanne, Titus and Murphy entered into an agreement to arrange the three Class B races on the programme last Saturday so that Dute could take the star event, the one mile open, in his own home, and that the other two should be won by Murphy and Titus. This little scheme, it is said, was concected on the train as the men were coming into the city and a man who is financially interested in the circuit chasers told E. M. Knapp before the races that the plan had been agreed upon.

"A gentleman, whose name I do not care to divuige." said Mr. Knapp, "said before the races that Murphy would be allowed to take the mile handleap. shot through."

It would seem that the men are not at all careful in the way they talk about the affair, for Cabanne and Titus express themselves very forcibly about Murphy's breaking faith with them. They are all now in Kansas City, and Dute and Titus said, before they started, that they would see that Murphy won no prizes there.

This morning the local member of the National Racing Board wired Chairman Geo. D. Gideon a statement of the case, and the Racing Board will sift the matter to the bottom.

ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS. Western Division Meet of the A. A. U.

in Chicago To-Day.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 31.—The athletic championships here to-day of the A. A. U. will be made noteworthy by the appearance of John V. Crum, the sensational Iowa sprinter. The best amateurs in the West will take part in the following events:

Good Impression in Chicago. Lew Holland, the St. Louis sprinter, continues to attract much attention and some tinues to attract much attention and some are even speculating whether he may not outrun the supposedly invincible Crum, says the Chicago Record. Holland is a remarkably quick starter, whereas Crum has sometimes been criticised for alleged slowness in getting away. It is entirely likely that Mr. Crum will be found getting into his running quick enough when he thinks he needs to do his best, but for all the speed the Iowa man has it looks as if the 100 and 220-yard runs Saturday would be interesting. Holland's work on the association field the last few days has been of a kind that induces onlookers readily to credit the St. Louis story that he did it in 10 seconds.

REPORTS ONLY SPECULATIVE.

English Papers Discuss the Trial Doings of the Yachts. LONDON, Aug. 31.-The Field regards the reports of the doings of the yachts in America as all rather speculative.

"The general opinion here," the paper goes on to say, is "that Valkyrie III. in a race to windward and down the wind trial, will dispose of Defender rather easily, if the breeze permits Valkyrie III. to carry all of her canvas without heeling to more than deck gear. In anything like a lower sail breeze, even a breeze of full jib header sirength, Defender may prove the better boat, and especially if there is much reaching. This estimate is based on American reports that Defender ls very still."

The Field declines to believe that Capt. Haff kept Defender back in the trials, and indicules the idea that there was anything unfair in Lerd Dunraven's courteous request to Mr. Hystop to measure Valkyrie's water line. "The general opinion here," the pape ages for the Injury to His Arm. CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 31.-Billiardist Jacob Schaefer has begun suit against the North Schaefer has begun suit against the North Chicago Street Railway Co. for $10,000 damages, the result of injuries received when he was thrown off a North Side cable car a month ago by a conductor. Schaefer's arm was broken, and the extent to which the accident may affect his billiard playing, probably, will form a most interesting problem in the suit. In his petition Schaefer reserves the right to increase the amount of his demand for damages, in case it develops that his arm is hurt worse than he now supposes.

Prize Fighters' Troubles.

Prize Fighters' Troubles.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 30.—Dick O'Brien of Lewiston, Me., was arrested last night on a warrant charging him with engaging ina prize-fight at the old armory Wednesday evening. He was arrested just before Capt. Daly declared the Godfrey-Choynski fight off. He was taken to Dedham Street Station and later released on $1,000 bails furnished by friends. A warrant charging Wolcott with an offense similar to that of O'Brien has been sworn out, but Wolcott could not be found.

HER DREAM CAME TRUE

How Mrs. Keyes Came to Find Robert Inman's Body.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—There are a number of claimants for the $500 feward-offered for the recovery of the body of Robert Inman, the young yacht owner, who was Island, yesterday, Mrs. Keyes, wife of the hotel-keeper, will probably receive the reward. She said to her husband yesterday: "You can go to New York if you like but I intend to remain right here and watch for Mr. Inman's body. I dreamed the other night it would come down this way and drift in with the tide." "And you know," she added, "$500 would come in very handily." Mr. Keyes came alone to New York, grumbling. Mrs. Keyes took a chair to the beach and gazed at the calm sea. At 1 o'clock p. m. she ran into the hotel and shouted: "Fritz! Fritz! There's a body in the water, and I'm sure it is Mr. Inman's."

By the time Fritz could get out she had launched a boat and put out for the body, which was soon ashore, and proved to be that of Inman. She believes in dreams now.

and Grace shot badly, and, being in the worst of tempers, made himself as objectionable to Tom as he possibly could.

"Nunks is shirry to-day," whispered Tom to old Stockle, with a disrespectful grin.

"Eh, puir mori, he's aye that when he's been shooting crooked," assented the brewer, who loved to lapse into broad Scotch. "But it's nae philosophic. For we a hae our days, and there's times when I mysen couldna hit a cow-byre."

"You are not in that state to-day though," said Tom, with conviction. "I never saw any one shoot better."

"Ah, weel, I feel as if I couldna miss the day," answered old Stockle, obviously pleased at the commendation. And then he added: "Eh, mon! I wish I could get spot at the wildcat which Tooncan refaired to."

"No such luck, I expect," observed Tom. "These beggars are too infernally shy. I did get a bang at one last year, when I was out by myself, certainly, I dare say it was this same one. But I was a bit too keen to be the part of the stockle confidently. "There's nae been a stockle confidently."

so I missed."
"But I wadna miss," exclaimed old Stockie, confidently. "There's nae been a wildcat shot in Inverness this twa year."
"No, they're awfully scarce, I believe. It's somewhere just about here that the brute hangs out, from what Duncan said. Hilloa, what's up?"
This last query was occasioned by a sudden halt in the line of the shooters, and some rather excited gestures on the part of Duncan, the gille. They were approaching the summit of a ridge, which ran at this

"Don't you see it? Make haste before it loubles back."
Old Stockle raised himself on one knee and took a long and careful aim. He could just detect the moving object, though he could not descry what it was or in the least gauge the distance.
"Give it both barrels," muttered Tom, "cats take a lot of shot."
Bang! Bang!
Tom will never forget the wild and tumulfuous joy of those succeeding moments. Old Stockle could shoot straight enough when he knew where to aim, and the Duke's knickers were too large a mark to miss, even at eighty yards. Both barrels hit the corduroys. Tom could distinctly hear the shot rattle against them. Then the Duke of Musselburgh leaped to his feet with an unearthly yell. He threw down his gun, he danced upon the heather, he raved, he stamped, he swore.
Tollhurst, his host, came running across to him with an anxious, perturbed expression.
"My dear Duke, what is the matter?"

uncle, the Duke of Musselburgh, who was next gun to old Stockle, some seventy yards away to the right. His Grace was stout and plethoric, and his style of crawling looked the reverse of dignified. But he managed to get along at a tolerable pace, notwithstanding, and was soon a little in advance of old Stockle and Tom.

Now, as his nephew caught sight of the Duke's cord knickers, rising large and obvious among the heather, a sudden and irreststible impulse selzed upon the young man's soul. If he had stopped to think he might have overcome the impulse, but he didn't. The knickers made a magnificent mark. No other part of the Duke was exposed. He was eighty yards away. A charge of No. 6 at that range and into those stout cordureys could inflict no serious harm, yet would go far to wipe out the score which Tom owed the Duke.

In a second Tom had pulled old Stockle by the sleeve with a whispered "Hist"

"What is it?" murmured the brewer.

"Hist!" repeated Tom, trembling with excitement. "Look there!"

He pointed as he spoke to the Duke of Musselbugh's cordureys.

Old Stockle looked and involuntarily shifted his gun in the direction indicated. He was much too blind to sea at that distance, though he fancied he could decry something moving among the heather.

"Really, Mr. McStockinson," Tollhurst, senior, expostulated, "this is—hardly the spirit in which to treat such e—a lament-

"Don't you realize that you might have killed me, you biank jackampes?" thundered the Duke of Musselburgh.
"Aweel-aweel," said McStockinson, recovering a little from his amusement, "you'll never be makin' a fuss aboot a wee matter like this. At that distance, and wi' sio stout breens there can hae been nac har-r-run effected. The shot will hae nac done mair than hae just tickled you up?" His Grace looked as though he were about to have a fit. Tollhurst stood aghast. This good gentleman was not more than ordinarily imbued with class instincts. But the expression "tickled up," as applied to a duke's person, had a shocking and a sacri-sion when Tollhurst, senior, had ventured to champion his son's claims.

This settled the matter. For the Duke of Musselburgh was not a man whom Tollhurst could afford to offend. A great magnate, with a long rent-roll and any amount of interest, whose only sister moreover, was Tollhurst's wife, and who had a large parsonally to dispose of at his decease, re-father rented a large grouse-moor in Inverness-shire, on which he and his friends had capital sport annually. But Tom was never allowed to take part in the big shoots, although he was now rising 21, and could manipulate a gun as well as most. Tom's maternal uncle, the Duke of Musselburgh, was the author of this absurd injunction. Five years previously, in his boyhoods days, Tom had nearly shot the Duke, and the Duke could not forget it. -Although age and experience had long since taught Tom caution, and he was now as careful and trust himself out in his nephew's pany.

"If Tom shoots, I don't," his grace it by wearing glasses. The consequence was that his shooting was terribly erratic; and had it not been that all the other guns knew this and gave him a wide berth, old McStockinson would infallibly have found frequent employment for the Iverness-shire Coroner. The Duke himself was beginning to get rather afraid of the old fellow; whis and gave him a wide berth, old McStockinson would infallibly have found frequent employment for the Iverness-shire Coroner. Tem liked old Stockie—as they called him personally; and old Stockie liked him Junong the brewer's many excellent qualities was that of absolute independence. He are a straw for anybody. Even the Fibre, to whom all Tollhurst's other guests year to know all Tollhurst's other guests year to knee, could inspire no awe to this study old Scotsman. Tom enjoyed seeing him stand up to His Grace, when the latter with in a rage. Perhaps the Duke really lived it, too. At least, overbearing people do, as a rule, take most to those who are not afraid of them. And so old Stockie would have contradicted the Caar of Russia himself had he considered His Imperial Highness to be in need of contradiction.

But while he liked old Stockie as a man. But while he liked old Stockie as a man, Tom did not like him as a substitute for himself upon his father's moor. Indeed it was not to be expected that he should, from was not ware that his uncle, the Duke, was this year rather disposed to reference comfounded pride which prevented his proposing that Tom should take a gan, lent toward him, and that it was only his proposing that Tom should take a gan, lent toward him, and that it was only his proposing that Tom should take a gan, lent toward him, and that it was only his proposing that actually have done so had set Tom, will the nauel stupidity of young-sti ra, taken care to quarrel with His Gracoup in the year meming of the shoot. Tom sat up in his chair and prepared to argue the point. However, a kick from the paternal foot silenced him, and he swallowed his intended reply in his waist beit. But he made up his mind that, at the first opportunity, his uncle should pay dearly for his insulting remark.

The shooting party consisted of old stockle, Sir Donaid Pinkleburn, McNairn of McNairn and the Master of Screwnale, who, with Tollhurst and the Duke, made up the six guns requisite. They had every prospect of a good day, the weather was excellent, fine, but not too sunny, and birds were plentiful. The head gillis had, indeed, been growling a good deal lately about the depredations of a wild cat, of which he had caught sight several times, without, however, having been near enough to set a shot at it. The brute, it appeared, had its lair in some outlying coverts called Pinedale Copses, and had done its best to thin the birds in that immediate locality.

"But I'm hoping that one of you will manage to shoot the ver-mint the day," said the gillie, as they started. "We're not needing sich poachers to multiply amang us."

"Let me have the skin if the beast is bagged," said Old Stockle. "I want a real wild-cair's skin for my collection. They are getting rare sowakaya."

PRODUCTION OF

Mystery Surrounding Its Presentation for Probate Cleared Away.

PECULIAR

Will Scorched in a Fire a Year Age and Found in a Dump.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The mystery of the $200,000 will of the late Judge Advocate General Holt and of its surreptitious production for probate has been cleared away. Its discovery among many other papers of Judge Holt has been established and there are four witnesses who will make outh as to the facts in the case. They are Special Policeman D. P. Cunningham of No. 645 Eleventh street, N. E.; Harvey Lyles, owner of Lyles' Sand Wharf of No. 2121 F street, N. W.; Daniel Kniffen, a carpenter, of No. 643 Eleventh street, N. E., and John Jones, an East Washington carpenter.

The will, with the other papers of the Judge, was stored in the Knox warehouse, which was destroyed by fire on July 25, 1894.

The 1873 will was scorched in that fire, able square in the northwest section of Washington.

The presumption is that this young man is the one who mailed it to the Register for probate.

This strange story of the vicissitudes of the important document before its recent mysterious receipt by the Register of Willis was developed to-day.

Here the strange history of the $300,000 will, in the search for which the heirs-atlaw spent months, ends for the present. It will not be difficult to trace the document in its unusual course towards the Register of Wills.

If Mrs. Stickley's nephew sent it to the Register, he will probably be able to explain why he did not do so when he first found it, and why. he did not present it in person instead of by mail anonymously and under a gover addressed in disguised hand-writing.

Ing If he communicated with Mn Luke Devlin or with one of the legatees and turned the will over to them for probate, which it is natural to expect that he may have done, he will probably be able to explain why they should have permitted such an unusual proceeding in connection with a paper of so much value to them.

These are now mysterious points that have yet to be cleared up. Another one is, did the envelope in which the will was found and which was thrown away at the dump and lost, bear an indorsement revoking the will?

and lost, bear an indorsement revoking the will?

If this can be proved, or the fact that a revocation on the edge of the document was burned off, then the heirs-at-law who were soon to have received their large fortune will be able to obtain it.

This strange story of the finding of the 1872 will among the Judge's papers will substantiate its authenticity, and unless a more recent will can be found, which has not so far been done, in spite of every effort, the heirs-at-law must give up their golden hobes and see the fortune go to the two undreamed-of heiresses, Miss Hynes and Miss Throckmorton.

A Talk With Geologist Becker After Surveys in Alaska.

Surveys in Alaska.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 31.—Dr. George F. Becker, geologist in charge of this division of the Unifed States Geological Survey, has returned from Alaska, where he has been making a survey of the gold and coal fields along the shore line. He was accompanied by Dr. Wm. H. Dahl, who went to make a special report on the coal fields. This is the first work that has ever been done by the United States Geological Survey in Alaska. He says there is no doubt that Alaska is going to be an active mining region, but he does not believe it will rival the California mining belt. The veins are not so large and well developed, as flavy are in this tSate. There has been quite an excitement this summer at the placers at the head of Cook's Inlet. The amount of success thus far achieved hardly warrants the amount of interest exhibited. The profitable washings thus far dug are confined to a few miles on Bear Creek, which empties into the Turnagain Arm.

As to the coal deposits, the only coal Arm.

As to the coal deposits, the only coal found that seems likely to be of any commercial value was at Cook's Inlet. The coal is present in large quantities. Its heating effect is comparatively slight, so that it takes about two tons to do the work of one of Vancouver Island coal. He believed the coal mines could be economically mined, if the work was done on a large scale, and with great system, as the mines of Western Pennsylvania are worked.

He could not swim, but called a gang of fifteen men at work for him near-by and urged one of them to rescue the boy. Not one moved. Wormley put a rope about his body and was about to jump into the water when a grimy coal-driver stopped his team, saw the situation, and without a second's hesitation sprang after the boy, who had gone down for the third time. After a second attempt the boy was recovered, nearly dead, and both were hauled out, the driver nearly exhausted. The boy was finally resuscitated.
